Chicago Section Monthly Meeting

Presentation: Inspection and Repair of Condenser Waterboxes at Power Plants

The condenser waterboxes are used to cool water that has been processed through the turbine. They are an integral part of the plant and loss of cooling capacity can cause plant shutdown or other operations difficulties. This talk will highlight a case history of inspection and repair at a nuclear power plant. The same process would basically be used at a fossil plant if cooling of the water from the turbine is performed. The same process can be used on other types of condensers as well that experience decay due to mechanical damage or corrosion.

Speaker: Stuart Kleven, Alloyweld Inspection Co., Inc.

Mr. Kleven is an ASNT SNT-TC-1A, Level III in four methods, RT, UT, MT and PT and is an AWS CWI. He is a member of the ASTM E7 subcommittee on radiography and has authored and/or presented numerous papers on nondestructive testing. His current employment is with Alloyweld Inspection Company, Inc, a commercial NDT testing laboratory and weld shop in Bensenville, Illinois.
